

Chronology of the Four Gospels

(Harmony of the Gospels)

Much of this chronology follows that in The Narrated Bible by F. LaGard Smith, though I have made some adjustments of my own. (See Aschmann.net/BibleChronology/#Sources for more information.) The page numbers in the last column are from that book. (When I have changed the order these are marked in green, twice on page 1.)

Red: date or timespan provided in the text, or that can be calculated from it. The text that provides it is also in red.²

Bold and outlined: the most complete or key passage.

Blue outline: passages outside the four gospels.

Yellow background: passages that are not in chronological order in one of the gospels (or at least that The Narrated Bible organized in a different order).³

Sky-blue background: passages that are arranged in a different order merely for organizational reasons, not because of a real chronological problem.

Jesus calls Matthew (Levi)	Lake Gennesaret	9:9-17	2:13-22	5:27-39

² A few events cannot be dated, but are key in determining the order of other events, like the imprisonment of John the Baptist or his execution; these are also marked in red.

³ Mark and John seem to be almost entirely chronological, but often Matthew is not, and sometimes Luke is not.

⁴ And possibly also John, who may have been the other disciple who is not named. See footnote 5. These are 3 of the four fishermen who receive a more “official” call later on at the Sea of Galilee, mentioned only in the Synoptic Gospels. See Apostles.html.

⁵ John the apostle, the author of the fourth gospel, never mentions himself by name in his gospel, except indirectly as one of the two "sons of Zebedee" in John 21:2, apparently to show humility. Instead, he apparently refers to himself in other ways, as tradition confirms. He is almost certainly the "disciple whom Jesus loved" in John 13:23-25, 19:26-27, 20:2, and 21:7,20. He is also probably the "disciple who testifies" in John 19:35 and 21:24. And in this role he is quite possibly the other disciple who is not named in John 1:35-40. See Apostles.html.
